HAIR RESTORATION has come a long way since the first donor grafts were used to treat male pattern baldness in the late 1950s. US Hair Restoration, located in San Fernando Valley and led by medical director Dr. Parsa Mohebi, uses modern techniques and provides top-notch client services to anyone looking to get treatment for hair loss or to correct prior hair procedures. Clients walk away with the most natural look. "The worst scenario is if someone were to compliment you on your hair transplant," Dr. Mohebi says. "They should absolutely not be able to tell."

Dr. Mohebi has spent many years doing research on hair loss, treatment and the psychology of hair transplants and has traveled the world, giving lectures and presentations at medical conferences on topics such as the Laxometer — a device he invented that measures looseness of the scalp before determining whether a patient is a candidate for hair transplant. "The Laxometer also increases safety of the procedure and maximizes the number of grafts per patient," he says.

US Hair Restoration prides itself on being accessible and affordable, without sacrificing quality. The company provides a wealth of information on its website, including blogs from

Dr. Mohebi. In addition to the Encino headquarters, there are satellite locations in Beverly Hills and Tustin, with a staff ready to guide you through every step of the process. "We meet with each client from beginning to end, and follow up with them regularly," Dr. Mohebi says. "We also want everyone to be able to afford hair restoration and have payment plans and special rates for partners and families." The office also offers medical spa services, including laser skin rejuvenation, laser hair removal and Botox injections. ■
